

Workshop 1: Reclaim your Childhood

- What is the Reggio Emilia approach? How is it different from other early years philosophies?
- Why is child-initiated play important?
- Learn how to set up play ideas/ provocations that invite curiosity and wonder.
- Take away new and simple ideas to begin integrating into your learning space immediately.

Do you feel like your teaching ideas are stagnant?

Would you like to unleash your inner creativity in your classroom?

Research shows time and time again that child- initiated learning creates better outcomes across the board (e.g. building strong academic skills alongside highly developed 21st century skills).

The Reggio Emilia approach is a values-based philosophy where

- Children first and foremost are regarded as competent.
- Children have a 'hundred languages' to express themselves.
- The environment plays a foundational role in the process of making learning meaningful.
- Children and adults are learners and researchers alongside each other.

Join the first of many Educator workshops that will encourage your own growth in becoming reflective and thoughtful educators as you learn to practice through the lens of the Reggio Emilia approach.
